Guidance about making a grant application

Objects of the charity

The Marshall and Viggars Charitable Trust is a grant giving charity that was set up under the Will of Mrs Marjorie Viggars, who died on 8 November 2003.

The executors of the estate of Mrs Eileen Lucy Marshall decided in September 2017 to pay the whole of her residuary estate to the trustees of the Marjorie Viggars Charitable Trust. This greatly increased the size of the charity and in recognition of this, the trustees agreed to change the name of the charity to the Marshall and Viggars Charitable Trust in September 2017.

When are applications considered?

The trustees hold two meetings each year, usually in February and August.

You can apply for a grant at any time, but the deadline for applications is usually one week before the date of the meeting. If an application is received before the cut off date, then it will be considered at the following meeting.

How will I know if I have been successful?

Due to the large number of grant applications received each year, we only reply to successful applicants. If you have not heard anything within one month of the trustees meeting, you can assume that your application has been unsuccessful.

How frequently can I apply for a grant?

There is no limit on how frequently you can apply for a grant, but you are more likely to be successful if you make no more than one application every year.

Where should I send my grant application?

You should send your grant application to:-
